PARSONS CASE OPENS TODAY

Two Convicts on Trial for Murder of Miss Parsons, Three Years Ago.

HARLAN, Ky, Sept. 3.—The trial of Jerry Reed and Jim Robinson, negroes, charged with the murder of Miss Lula Parsons, Pine Mountain school teacher, on September 7, 1920, will be called here today, having been continued from April 6 on motion of the commonwealth on the ground of the absence of witnesses. Both negroes are in jail here and protest their innocence.

Early in June of this year John Bramley, said to have been star witness for the state in the case, was killed near here, along with his half-brother, Charles Mitchell.

The killing of Miss Parsons which took place along a lonely mountain trail after she had started from the railroad station to the school, has been a mystery which officers of the law have sought to unravel for nearly three years.

Two years ago State Veterinarian Wynnes of Kentucky was tried on a charge of killing Miss Parsons, and was vindicated by the jury.

The spot where the body of Miss Parsons, who had been attacked was found not far from a convict camp and suspicion was first directed towards the negroe convicts and a white guard. It is said that important evidence was obtained against Reed and Robinson, who were in the convict camp at the time of the murder, by John Bramley, when the three were in a Kentucky jail a year ago It is not known if the state has preserved the testimony of Bramley in affidavit form or not.

TWO HARLAN RIFLEMEN TO ATTEND NATIONAL MEET

HARLAN, Sept. 4.—Two members of the local National Guard company won places on the Rifle Team that will represent Kentucky at the National Rifle meet to be held at Camp Perry next week.

Sergeants Virgil Brock and Jess Pace were the Harlan men to be picked for this important and honorable post.

A detachment from every National Guard company in the state were in competition at Camp Knox, and a state team of ten men was picked to meet similar teams from other states It takes a real expert to win honors in a match of this magnitude and the mountain section should feel proud of Brock and Pace who will go to defend Kentucky's laurels.

HUNG JURY FOR THIRD TIME IN CIRCILLIS CASE

HARLAN, Sept. 4—The jury in the case of Commonwealth vs Ed. Circillis was finally dismissed after they had reported that they were hopelessly deadlocked. Judge Newell, special judge from Maysville, sent them back three times with instructions to find a verdict but after the fourth report, he dismissed the jury and continued the case to the fifth day of the November term.

The jury was out twenty-five hours and stood at the end six for conviction and six for acquittal.

It is believed that a change of venue will be sought before the case comes again as this is the third time Circillis has been tried here with a hung jury.

MERCHANTS URGED TO CLEAN IN FRONT OF THEIR STORES

All the merchants and business houses of Middlesboro are urged to clean up in front of their premises, and to have the rubbish piled in front tomorrow morning so that it may be carried away by a wagon which the city is furnishing for that purpose The pavement and gutters are in special need of attention.

Middlesboro is to have about 500 prominent visitors from this immediate section Wednesday and it should be a matter of pride to the citizens of the city to make it immaculate for the reception of those who are coming here for the first time.

SAYS KY. CITIES MAY BE EUTOPIAN

State Health Officials Say All Towns Adopt Slogan of Cleanliness.

LOUISVILLE, Ky Sept. 4—Every town in Kentucky an Eutopia of spotlessness, a center of health and a thing of beauty, is seen by Dr. P E Blackerby, assistant secretary of the State Board of Health if each town were to live up to the slogan of one that placards its railroad station with the following,

"This is my city.

"And because I love it, I shall try to make and keep it beautiful Since orderliness is essential; to beauty, I will not throw trash on the streets nor in the parks, nor in any public place. And since health is essential to beauty, I will not expectorate, nor do anything else to spread disease germs in any place where people congregate. So shall my city be clean, and beautiful, so shall it be wholesome"

Dr. Blackerby who also is director of the Bureau of Public Health Work, as returning to Louisville when he had to wait in a spotless beautiful little town for a train connection This sign in large bold letters hung in the rail road station and because of it, he attributed the wonderful health record made in the last few years.

He urges that other towns copy this as a motto and believes that similar signs will do more good than hundreds of lectures on health and cleanliness

"Its generally the most cleanly persons in a town who attend such lectures whereas this sign reaches every one," he said

A THOUGHT

For the wind passeth over it, and it is gone; and the place thereof shall know it no more.—Ps. 103:16.

History fades into fable; fact becomes clouded with doubt and controversy; the inscription moulders from the tablet; the statue falls from the pedestal. Columns, arches, pyramids, what are they but heaps of sand, and their epitaphs but characters written in the dust.—Washington Irving.

NO LABOR DAY CELEBRATION

In nearly all the towns Labor Day celebrations took place yesterday. There were parades in which workers of the various trades paraded and in which gorgeously decorated floats were displayed. The events were witnessed and appreciated by thousands.

In Middlesboro, there was no celebration; business moved forward the same as on other days. In spite of the fact that it was a legal holiday, a day designated for the cessation of customary duties and for celebration, the majority of us here hardly knew it was a holiday.

Whether or not we believe in organized labor, some credit is due the great army of workers whom we all depend upon for thhe necessities and luxuries of life. Men who operate the trains, mine the coal, run shops and factories; men who, as a rule, never get much credit individually, certainly merit praise collectively or as classes.

All persons who work are not conspiring to throw the country into a condition of chaos by joining in strikes; millions of them are faithful employes, content to carry in their small way, their share of the burdens of life. They know that they depend upon capitalists for their support and that the later are equally dependen upon them and they have no desire to change the age-ld custom.

Workers of this class, honest and conscientious men and women who make up that great body known as the masses, form the major part of our population. We think it is very fitting that a day should be observed in their honor and Middlesboro's laxity in this is not due, we are certain, to any lack of respect for Labor.

YOUR FEARS

A baby 100 years old. Marylin Jean Anderson falls off a railroad bridge into the river at Chippewa Falls, Wis. Water is warm. She enjoys herself, evidently thinks she's in a bathtub. She kicks happily. That keeps her afloat. Rescued.

A grown-up, unable to swim, would have drowned. Why? Because fear would counteract the animal ability to swim that is born in all of us. Frightened, the grown-up would yell and empty his lungs of the air necessary to keep him afloat.

Fear drowns more people than water.

Blondin walked across a cable suspended above Niagara Falls. The rest of us would get frightened, lose our balance and drown. But we could walk the same cable stretched only a foot above safe ground.

It isn't the difficulty of walking on a cable that makes people fall. They topple off because they fear danger.

In a canoe, wind is more dangerous than rough waves. But the average person doesn't know this. So he feels safer when canoeing in a stiff wind. The feeling of safety helps him keep his treacherous craft balanced.

Fear increases, by many times, the hazard of a dangerous situation. That is because fear involves loss of confidence in our ability to conquer the dangerous situation.

Confidence in self is what makes the man of average or even inferior ability rise to greater success than the timid individual with exceptional abilities, natural gifts or skilled training.

Never frighten a child. Fear is contagious, feeds on itself. Fear makes failure in life almost inevitable. Self-confidence is the key to achievement, to success.

COPYRIGHT 1923—NEA SERVICE INC

LETTER FROM LESLIE PRESCOTT TO ALICE HAMILTON CONTINUED

When I reach the part of my letter where I was telling you about my Eden, Alice dear, Jack came home and asked me to take him for a drive in my new car. It is a very lovely one and I am very proud of it but more than all the rest I am proud of the fact that I am able to drive again without being at all nervous.

Mother tells me that Karl has brought you a string of real pearls. She asked me about it, dear, and I told her to let him buy them for you if he wanted to, because I knew that he looked upon you just as his little sister and of course we both know he has so much money he doesn't know what to do with it. Sometimes it is more graceful to accept a gift than to refuse it.

I'll bet you they don't look as pretty as that string of beads you gave me. Sometimes I think it is all nonsense to buy real pearls when you can have imitations that look as well as these lovely ones of mine.

I do wish you would try and get me another string of them and also I wish you wouldn't be so mysterious about where you got them. I would like to give some to Beatrice Grimshaw for a wedding present. You remember I wrote you that I thought I would divide this string with her since it is such a long one. You made such a fuss about it that I decided not to. To tell the truth, I have grown so fond of them that I rather hated to do it anyway.

So you think Betty Stekley is going to fall in love with an Englishman, do you? Don't you do it, my dear, for when it comes time for you to get married there is no man who is worthy on an American girl but an American.

Italians and French and Serbians, they tell me, make great lovers. I wasn't allowed to find out when I was in Paris.

When are yo ugoing back to London? Honestly, Alice, I think your scudding over to Paris, you and Betty, with only Karl for a chaperon, is exceedingly flapperish. I can't understand how Mrs. Stokley could let you do this. Now don't be angry for I haven't told mother what I thought of it all and I don't think she would have let you have the pearls if I hadn't said I tho't it was all right for you to accept them.

You say, Alice dear, that you think a woman must love a man a great deal to bear him children. Well, I love Jack so much that whenever mother asked me to go over with her to England this fall, when she went to bring you home, I declined. I just couldn't leave my husband and my baby.

I don't want you to stay over there later than October, for I intend to have Junior baptized on Thanksgiving Day, and you and Sydney Carton are to be godmother and godfather.

Lots of love, my dear, and I hope you are as happy in England seeing all the sights as I am over here with Jack sitting on the arm of my chair and my baby's head snuggling up close against my bosom.

Leslie.

Business Men for Churches

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—Installation of business methods in the Episcopal churches of America is the aim of Lewis B. Franklin, Vice President of the Episcopal National Council. Mr Franklin, a prominent New York banker, believes there is no incompatibility between modern business and religion, and he has issued a call for 4,00 volunteers to serve as church business managers.

"Business needs more Christianity and Christianity needs more business," Mr. Franklin explained. "Good management and effective organization in church affairs are the results sought for."

"May we take our ponies?" asked Nick, patting Blackie on his soft, glossy neck.

"Certainly," nodded Mister Gallop. "That's what they're for. Jump on both of you, for I'm in a hurry. I can tell you all about my errand while we are riding."

Nancy scrambled up on Snow, Nick jumped on Blackie, and Mister Gallop swung himself up on his own brown and white pony like a circus rider.

"Come on," he called, "follow me. The path is narrow so we can't ride side by side. But I can talk to you anyway over my shoulder."

So off they started up the steep little mountain path that seemed to get narrower and steeper every minute.

"I got word this morning," Mister Gallop called back, "that Mrs. Bear and her two sons, Buster and Bunch, had been trout-fishing. Now Tommy Trout and Timmy Trout and all their relatives are great friends of mine and I promised to help them. That's where we are going now. To see if it is true."

"Has Mrs. Bear a fishing line?" asked Nancy.

"The very best kind," answered Mister Gallop. "Her own paw. It's all fixed with five sharp hooks and can't get tangled in the brushes. Once she gets ahold of a trout-fish it's goodby Mister Trout. Sh! We're coming to the creek now. We'll tie our horses and tiptoe the rest of the way. It's not so steep here."

Down slid the Twins and followed the fairy. By and by he stopped. "Nick, you watch by that big rock; Nancy, sit quietly under that pine-tree and I'll go on a bit. If you see Buster Bear or Bunchy Bear or Mrs. Bear, blow as hard as you can. I'll come at once."

Berton Braley's Poem

BUCCANEERS

Bold bad pirates on a bold bad craft
(Three little kids on a make-shift raft!).
And the captain says, with a cruel lip,
"Men, get ready, an' we'll board that ship.
She's chuck full of a heap of gold,
Tons of ducats are inside her hold,
Rubies, diamonds! Oh, you better bet
She's got treasure that we're gonna get!"

Where's the ship? Well, to you and me
There's no ship for the eyes to see;
But those bold pirates, they can see her plain,
A tall, tall galleon built in Spain,
With her captain shaking in his Spanish shoes,
As he thinks of riches he is doomed to lose
To the bold bad pirates on a bold bad craft
(Three little kids on a makeshift raft!).

Oh, the pirate chief waves his sword in wrath
(To you and me it's a piece of lath,
But we're grown up and we're lost our sight;
To the pirate chief it's a sword, all right!)
He waves his sword and he cries out, "Men!
We'll board that ship!" and then —jst then,
His mother calls and he wails "Aw gee,
All the time she's a-callin' me!"
And the spell is gone, and the bold bad craft
Is just three kids on a makeshift raft!

Before the war Great Britain owned nearly 41.5 per cent of the world's total iron and steel tonnage, but now this has decreased to less than 33 per cent.

Eggplant

Use vegetables and more vegetables! Only keep in mind the needs of a balanced ration and plan the meals accordingly.

Eggplant is a delicious vegetable with many possibilities. It makes an excellent hearty dish if stuffed with meat or [illegible] vegetables [illegible] butter [illegible] vegetable can be [illegible] long cooking [illegible] vegetables [illegible] water [illegible] flavorless [illegible]

[illegible] eggplant put it in a square [illegible] and dip it in boiling [illegible] Remove from [illegible] plunge into cold water [illegible] and [illegible] minute and drain.

Stuffed Eggplant

One good sized plant, [illegible] on [illegible] fresh mushrooms, [illegible] tablespoons cold chopped meat, [illegible] tablespoons diced [illegible] 2 tablespoons butter and [illegible] coarse bread crumbs, 1 2 teaspoon [illegible] 1 4 teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon minced parsley.

Cut eggplant in halves lengthwise without paring. Blanch and cold dip halves of vegetable. Then put in briskly boiling salted water and cook until tender but not mushy or broken. Drain well and scoop out the inside leaving as thin and firm a shell as possible. Chop the pulp quite fine. Melt butter. Add onion cut in thin slices and fry a pale straw color. Shred mushrooms and fry with onion. Add chopped eggplant and mix well. Cook [illegible] and remove from fire. Add meat, dried bread crumbs, parsley, salt and pepper. Mix thoroughly and put in eggplant shell. Put in shallow pan to bake. Cover the stuffing with coarse bread crumbs, dot thickly with tiny bits of butter and bake 20 minutes in a moderate oven. The crumbs should brown. Serve at once. Small eggplants can be used, each half being served individually.

Eggplant combines with other vegetables advantageously. If you have a little of this and a little of that in the [illegible] try a vegetable casserole for luncheon.

Baked en Casserole

One eggplant, 1 onion, 1 cup corn cut from the cob, 1 green pepper, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 1 1 2 cups tomatoes, [illegible] 1 teaspoon paprika, 2 tablespoons butter.

Melt butter, add onion minced and cook until onion is a pale straw color. Put pepper in boiling water for five minutes, plunge into cold water and rub off the outside skin. Cut open and remove seeds and white ribs. Cut in fine shreds. Scald tomatoes and slip off skins. Rub thru a fine wire sieve to remove the seeds. Mix all ingredients and turn into a well buttered baking dish. Cover and bake 45 minutes in a moderate oven.

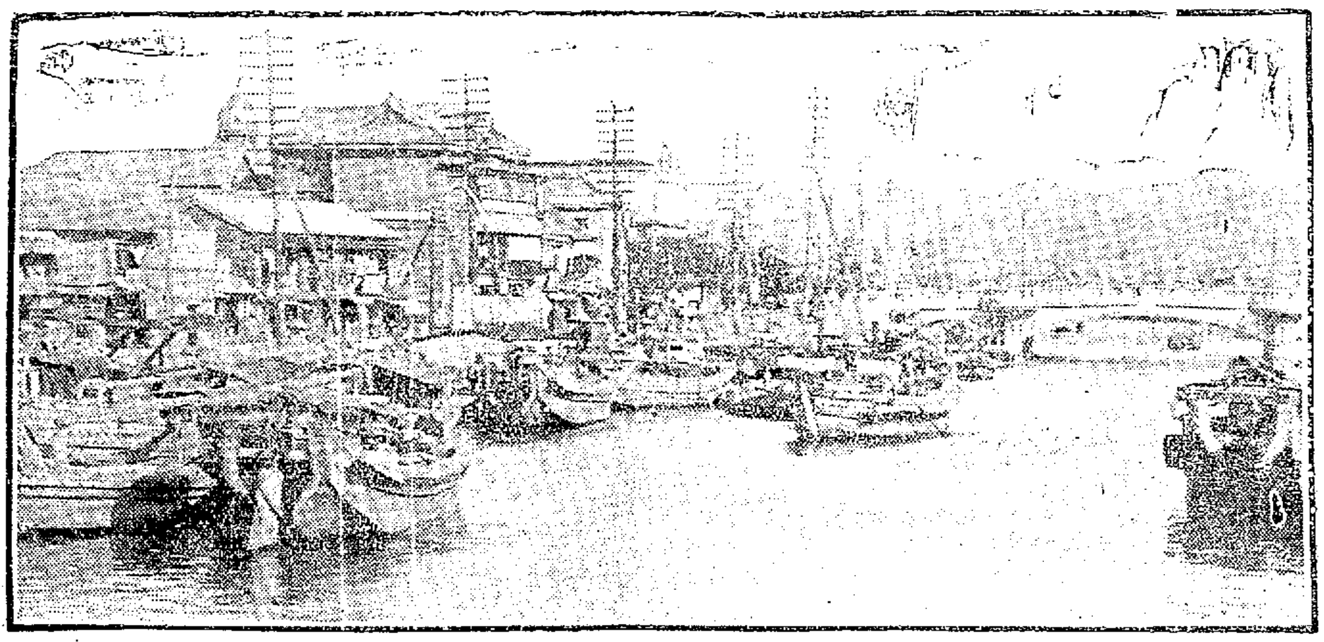
VIEWS FROM RUINED JAPAN

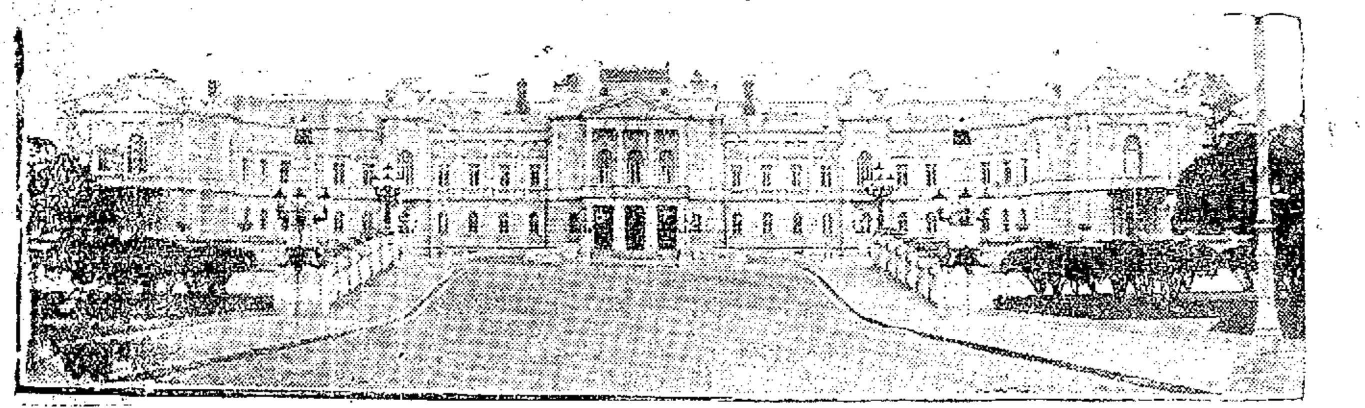
Cities Where Death and Destruction Follow in Wake of Earthquake and Fire---Half Million Lives and Billions in Property Destroyed

ON THE RIVER FRONT IN YOKOHAMA



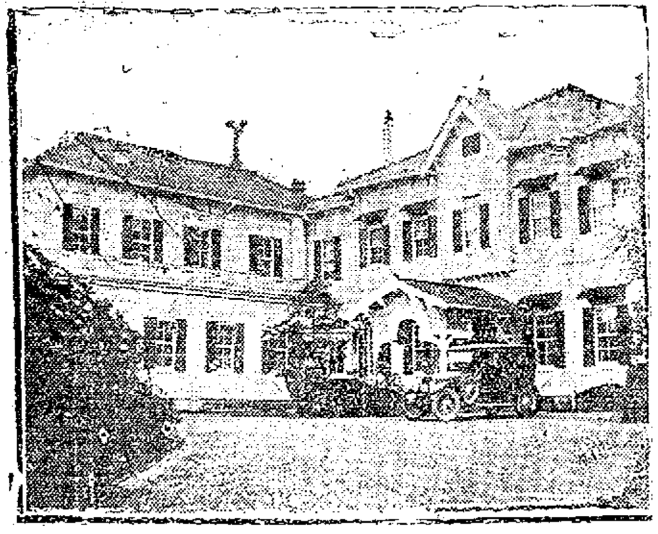
Yokohama is Japan's largest seaport, and ships from every maritime nation load at its modern docks. There is a river fleet of thousands of boats, too, engaged in lightering and in bringing too the piers the products oof the interior agricultural and industrial district. This picture shows part of the river fleet of native boats.

One of Tokyo's Royal Palaces



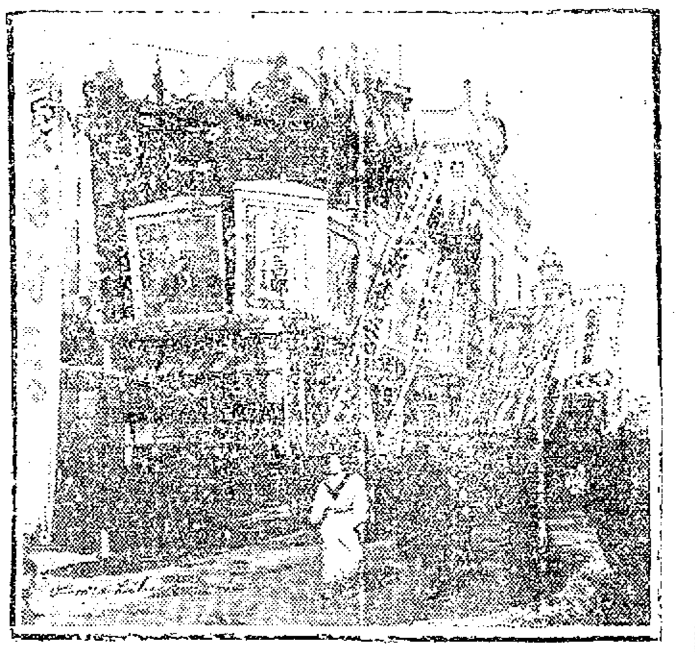
This is the Akasaka Palace, one of the impreial buildings in Tokyo. It has been completely remodeled in occidental style in recent years, and is used as a headquarters for all visiting royalty. The Prince of Wales was a guest here when he visited the orient.

America's Tokyo Embassy



The American embassy at Tokyo, if spared, will be the seat of America's relief work for the Japanese refugees mad homeless by fire and earthquake.

Street Scene in Tokyo



This is "Movie Row" in Tokya. The long banners suspended from bamboo poles are advertisements foor the various shows. The flimsy construction of many oft hese native buildings makes them highly inflamable.

ABOUT THE TWO DESTROYED CITIES

Yokohama is Center of Silk Industry; Tokio, Capital, One of the Largest Cities.

Yokohama is situated on the east coast of Hondo, on the Bay of Tokio, seventeen miles southwest of the Japanese capital, with which it is connected by rail.

It has a population of about a half million.

The cityhas excellent harbor facilities and is well laid out, containing a number of imposing public buildings. Yokohama is the center of a vast silk industry and is also an emporium for tea, laquered and bamboo wares, metals and fish.

The city was selected as a treaty port in 1858.

Owing to an expansion of its municipal limits in 1901, Yokohama comprises not only the more modern Yokohama, but the much older town of Kanagawa. It was the scene of the reception of Commodore Perry, the American naval officer, whose visit to the island empire first brought it into touch with modern civilization.

Among Largest Cities.

Tokio, capital of Japan, with a densley populated area of forty square miles, is one of the world's largest cities. Conditions in it approximate more nerely both the crowded conditions of Occidental cities and their architectural development than any other of Japan's cities.

Until the restoration, the city was called "Yedo" and it became the capital of Japan only in comparatively recent years, the old capital being Kioto, 200 miles distant. It is perhaps the city of Japan best known to visitors from the Occidental countries, being oneofthe principal railway centers of the empire.

The celebrations of the picturesque festivals from which Japan is noted are unusually brilliant in Tokio. Great numbers of temples, imperial palace buildings, imposing business structures after the Western model, modern railway buildings and industrial plants along most modern lines are located in the city.

Castle of Tokio.

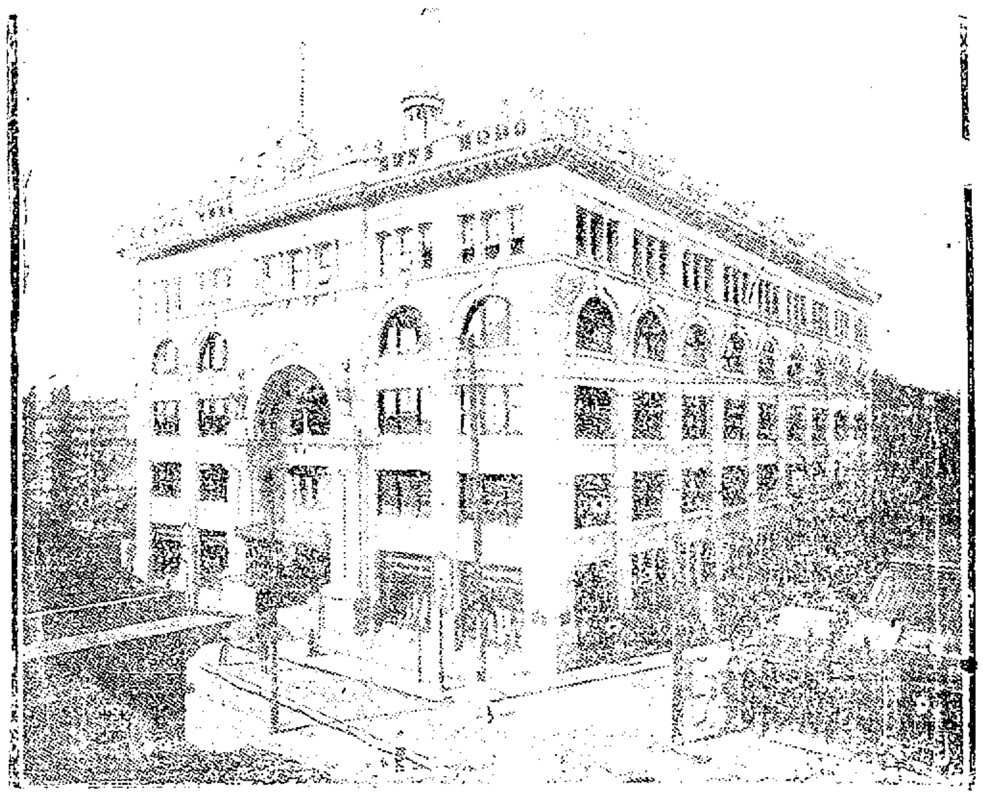
On a hill west of the city is the Castle of Tokio, scene of the ancient Shoguns palace and several public offices of old Japan. About it the old daimios' plantations originally stood, but this area some years ago was given over virtually entirely to public buildings, barracks, government schools and similar structures, all of stone and brick.

Tokio is well situated on undulating ground on the shore of the Bay of Tokio and is divided into two parts by the River Sumida emptying into the bay. It is divided into fifteen wards and its suburbs into six divisions. The different industries and occupations are, to a degree, segregated to particular districts.

The principal thoroughfare is the "ginza" a wide, brick-paved street, with the trees on both sides.

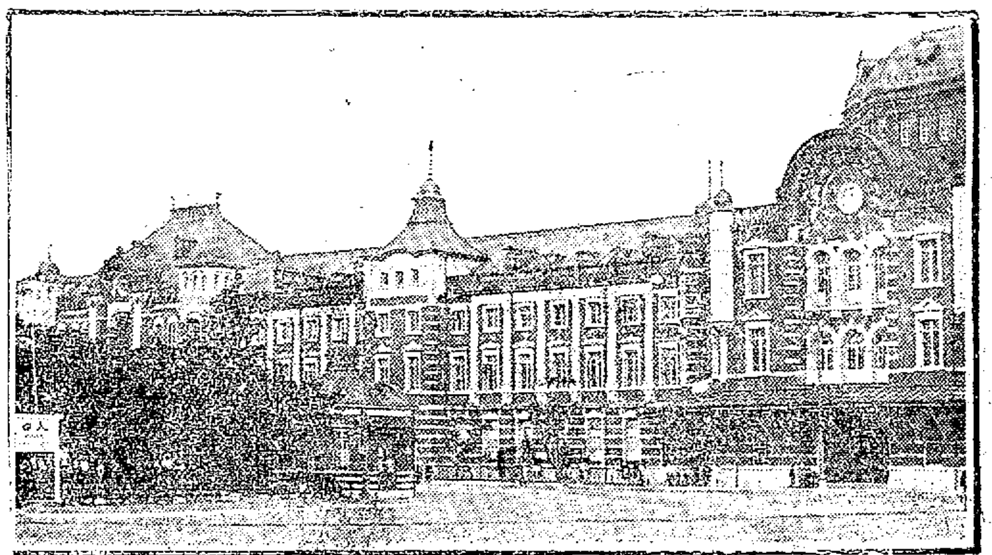
The density of building and the light wood and bamboo construction of most of the dwelling houses have made Tokio subject to a number of disastrous fires. Each of these has been seized on as an opportunity for widening the streets and making other improvements

Where Tokyo Fire Started



The Mitsukoshi store—one of the biggest department stores in the orient—is where theTokyo fire started. Owing to the breaking water mains the fire department was helpless in trying to check its spread.

Tokyo Rail Station Destroyed?

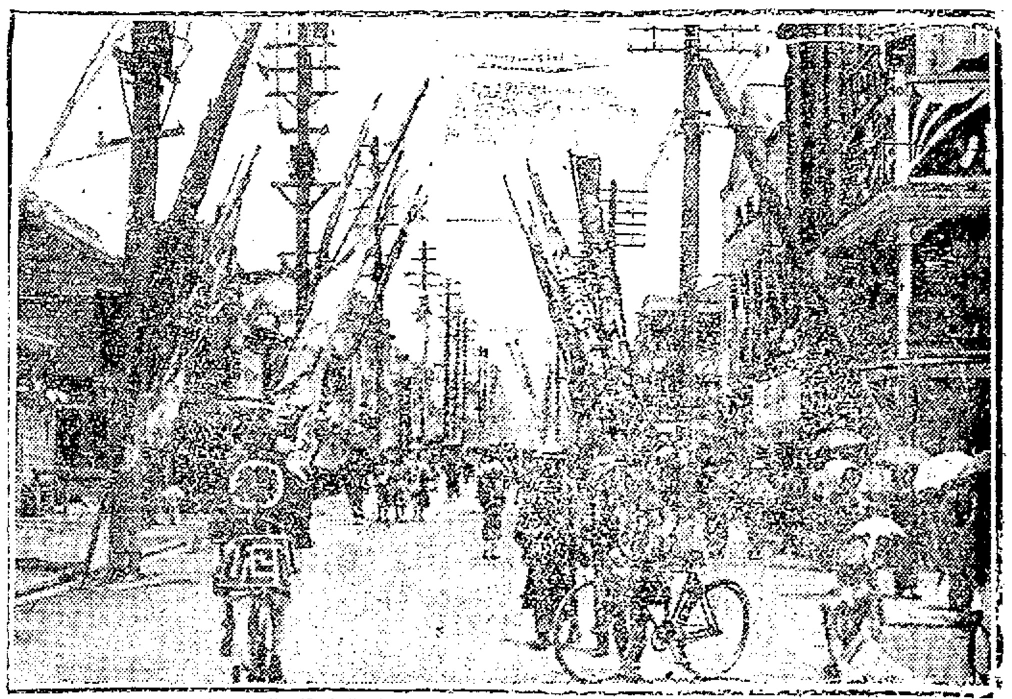


Reports from the Tokyo fire and earthquake say the rail communications fro m the capital to thhe interioor were destroyed. This is one of the principal stations in the Japanese capital.

STREET SCENE, YOKOHAMA

Here is a typical street scene in Yokohama, Japan's largest seaport, said to have been destroyed by fire and earthquake. Most of the houses are of flimsy construction.

YOKOHAMA'S "MOVIE ROW"



Here is Yokohama's "movie row," officially known as Isosakicho dori. The banners suspended from poles are advertisements for the various cinema productions.

ARMY AND NAVY ARE BITTER AIR RIVALS; WILL CONTEST FOR HONORS AT INTERNATIONAL RACES

Lt. L. H. Sanderson (top) ensign A. J. Williams.

Lt. H. J. Brow (top) Lt. S. W. Callaway.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 13.—The navy is determined that, in the international air races here Oct. 1, 2 and 3, it will wrest some of the glory and honors now held tightly by the army.

Last year, at Detroit, the army finished first and second in the Pulitzer trophy race, the world's air classic, and captured most of the honors in other events.

It now holds the world's speed, altitude, endurance and non-stop records and is looking around for new aerial conquests.

But that it will have difficulty in realizing its rosy dream comes confidently from its friendly enemy, the navy.

Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, chief of bureau of aeronautics of the navy, has taken steps that insure the keenest competition ever witnessed between the two branches of the service.

Mystery Planes

The personnel of the navy contestants for these races, just made public, and this includes the marine corps, shows that it will have four entries in the Pulitzer trophy race for high-speed planes, two entries in the Liberty Engine Builders' trophy contest, for military observation airplanes, and two entries in the Merchants' Exchange of St. Louis trophy race, for large capacity airships.

The navy is also having built for these races two new Curtiss racing planes, which are expected to surpass anything in the speed line ever put out by the Curtiss Company. The new ships will be flown by Lieutenant H. J. Brow and Ensign A. J. Williams, who finished third and fourth in the Pulitzer race last year. The other navy entries for the race will be Lieutenant L. H. Sanderson, the latter from the marine corps. All four are crack pilots and experienced racing men.

The other naval entries are Second Lieutenant G. B Hall (marine corps) and Lieutenant D. C. Allen, in the Liberty Engine Builders' trophy race, and Lieutenant M. A. Schur and Boatswain E. E. Reber, in the Merchants' Exchange trophy race.

Army to Stand Pat

Major General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the U. S. Army air service will designate the personnel of the army's contesting pilots. Lieutenant Russell Maughan, winner of the Pulitzer trophy race last year, and holder of the world's speed record of 236.5 miles per hour, made at Dayton, O., March 29, 1923, is expected to be a contestant.

The army will build no new ships for these races, but is improving and tuning up the two Curtiss racers and the Verville Sperry plane which finished first, second and fifth in the Pulitzer race last year. General Patrick expects to obtain a speed oof 30 miles an hour greater from the Verville Sperry than the 180 miles per hour it made last year.

Among the foreign entries expected are Brack-Papa, the Italian ace, former holder of the world's speed record; Lieutenant Mainardi, of the Italian army, winner of many European events, and Sadi-Lecointe, the French flyer, also a former world's speed record holder.

St. Louis is spending $200,00 getting its field ready for the races.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 4.—Historians, attention!

Attention, likewise, ye owners of well preserved and well pruned family trees. Information is wanted about a great public benefactor who gave his last name to a coffee pot, but left for the other side of the Styx without properly affixing his first one to it.

If any of the proprietors of ancestorial redwoods should happen to discern upon one of the sturdy branches the name of Biggin they will confer a favor upon the Bohemian element of the Vieux Carre by getting in touch with Lyle Saxon, 510 Royal street, leader of the agitation to carve into imperishable marble the features of the man responsible for the brand of coffee served in New Orleans and many other portions of the south.

Why should he not be immortalized? Beggin it was who saved the south from the menace of boiled coffee and permitted the fragrant drink to be concocted so thick you can almost shake it out of a cup like a glass of jelly.

So if you go to a store in quest of a coffeepot in New Orneans, you must ask for a beggin, that the clerk may know what you mean. Webster learned that the beggin got its name "from one Mr. Beggin who invented it about 1804." That's all that can be learned about him. Which lack of information is very disconcerting to the Quarter Club and others interested in preserving the atmosphere of the French Quarter who decided at a recent gathering to immortalize Beggin in a statue.

Apropos of Beggin, the announcement of an eminent scientist that coffee is not harmful in moderation strated a discussion here as to what moderation is.

So it was that a rabbit was obtained to find out just how much coffee could consistently be considered moderate.

Mr. Rabbit was filled so full of coffee that he could not get another drop into his little tummy and continued to frisk about his cage and conduct himself elsewhere just as any good little bunny should.

Then the scientists decided he should be fed coffee in concentrated doses. Enough caffeine was injected into him to equal 20 cups of coffee before there was any perceptible effect.

Maybe you can estimate how much a human being will have to consume before he gets any bad results.

BUS BOY IS WELL-KNOWN MOVIE WRITER

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., Aug. 30.—Bus boy by day—scenario writer at night!

That's "Cal" Conant, general factotum in the Y. M. C. A. cafeteria here.

From dishes and pans to intricate movie plots certainly is a far cry, you will admit. But "Cal" happens to be one "struggling author" who's not going to run the risk of starving while he's writing for the royalties to roll 'round.

In the restaurant, where he's worked for four years now—ever since he was 15—he's sure of his three squares every day. And then he has $10 or $12 a week coming besides. This tides him along while he's burning the midnight oil over his little pad of yellow paper.

When "Nobody's Money," starring Jack Holt, showed here recently, nobody—save a lanky youngster in the gallery and maybe a companion or two—paid any heed to the author's line under the title.

Fact is, none around the cafeteria, except the bookkeeper, remembered having heard "Cal's" full name—Callie D. Conant.

But down in "Cal's" savings account was a check for $500 for the scenario. And up in his room was a letter from his agency announcing it had been offered $1,200 for one of his plots, but was holding it for $1,500.

"You say you want my picture?" asked "Cal," as he set a load of dishes on the "bus." "Well, will these clothes do?" And "Cal," the scenario writer, posed for the photographer right in the cafeteria in his bus boy's uniform.

So, if you happen to see the name "Callie D. Conant" on the screen again, you'll know it's "Cal" of the kitchen brigade.

Friends are people who will listen to your troubles if you will let them tell theirs.

You Have A Real Interest In This Big Investment

THE telephone organization in Kentucky has entered upon a big task in which the public has more than a casual interest. This is to be a year of construction and expansion in an effort to care for the accumulated demand for service and provide for the needs of the future.

During the five year period, including the year 1923, our plans require an expenditure of $4,645,000 in Kentucky. Practically all of this is new money which must be secured from investors.

There is no difference in interest between the public and our stockholders. If we serve our stockholders wisely and efficiently, we shall render the largest benefit to the public.

We must give the best and broadest service possible. We must provide a service which will not only keep pace with the growth of the State, but also with the constantly increasing use of the telephone.

We must have rates low enough to enable every person who ought to have a telephone to have one and at the same time we must earn enough to attract capital to take care of this growth.

This is what your telephone organization is trying to do.

But our success depends upon the measure of the good will of the community we can get and hold.

There is no mystery about the telephone business; there is nothing peculiar about telephone people. Telephone workers are your neighbors and friends, no different from other people with whom you come in daily contact.

We want you to know us better and to be familiar with every feature of our business.

Ask us about the things that confuse you; visit our central offices and see what we are doing to serve you.
